Economic League Elected Officers, Developed Plans

A meeting of the Ulster County Taxpayers' Economic League, composed of delegates from the various local taxpayers' associations of the county, was held at the court house Friday evening. One of the matters of business taken up was the election of permanent officers, the following being named: President, George J. Mutari, Saugerties; vice president, Jay Terry, Kingston; secretary-Treasurer, Herbert Sears, Marlborough.

Two standing committees were named. The committee on county affairs includes Jay Terry, F. E. W. Darrow, E. P. Ward. President Mutari and the presidents of the local organizations were made a committee on organization of new locals. Messrs. Sears, Terry and M. L. Richards of New Paltz were named as a committee on state affairs.

The various locals represented agreed to be responsible for organizing new locals as follows: Kingston, in Hurley, Marbletown or Rosendale, Saugerties, in the town of Ulster and at Woodstock; Marlborough, in the town of Lloyd and Esopus. There is an organization in Esopus, but attempts will be made to increase its membership. New Paltz, in the town of Plattekill, a meeting to be held either in Clinsondale or Modena. There were no delegates present from Ellenville, therefore no designatiton was made for the local at that place.

At a recent meeting held in Marlborough a number of resolutions, most of them submitted by Mr. Sears, with two or three proposed by Ellenville delegates, were considered. The resolutions were again brought up for discussion Friday evening and will be submited to the members of Kingston Taxpayers' Association at their meeting March 6 for their consideration, the other locals in the county having approved them through their delegates.

Among the resolutions discussed were: That the county superintendent of highways be elected by vote of the people; and, where that is not the case, that the office include the county engineer; that all bond issues voted by the board of supervisors be submited to the people for ratification; that the townships have charge of the supervision and maintenance of county roads in their towns and that all construction work be done by contract; that county taxes be collected in two installments and that time for payment of taxes be extended.

A number of the resolutions were not taken up at the meeting Friday evening, for lack of time. They will be considered at a later meeting.

Couple Selected For The Jungle Wedding

It's all arranged, the couple has been selected by the Firemen's Committee for the big jungle wedding. The bride might be a next door neighbor and the bridegroom could be a pal. Numerous inquiries have been received at the circus office as to the identities of the young couple brave enough to have its matrimonial rites performed in a den of savage beasts, but the only way to find out the names of this young man and woman will be to watch the columns of this newspaper for the date of the wedding, which will be announced the first of the week.

This unique ceremony is attracting widespread attention and in all probability two of the leading news reel companies of the country will have cameramen here with their sound apparatus and the movies will later be shown at local theatres.

Monday night's performance will be one long to be remembered by the newsies, as they will be the guests of the firemen and the Robinson Bros. Circus, where a section of seats will be reserved for them and they will be able to whoop it up at the funny antics of the clowns, eat peanuts and drink pink lemonade to their heart's content.

A special school children's matinee will be given Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock and thousands of special tickets have been distributed throughout the schools of the city for the kiddies in order that each of them will be able to see the firemen's all-professional circus, Kingston's greatest indoor event.

Two in Jail on Charge Of Embezzlement

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 18 (AP).—A man who served as city treasurer of Milwaukee for 16 years and another who was head of the defunct Liberty State Bank, were in jail today awaiting arraignment on indictments charging embezzlement of $500,000 of city funds.

John I. Drew, city treasurer from 1916 to 1932, was charged by the grand jury with misappropriating the money, and I. J. Rosenberg, former bank president, with aiding him through his banking connections.

Deputy sheriffs arrested Drew late last night at St. Joseph's Hospital where he had been a patient for several days. He has been ill for several months. Rosenberg was arrested at his home. Both were denied release on bail, pending arraignment at the regular session of municipal court today.

State Discourages Back-to-Farm Trek Of Many New Yorkers

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 18 (AP).—The story of how nearly 40,000 New York state "city dwellers" have packed their possessions into automobiles, trucks and wagons and gone "back to the farm" since 1930 was told in records of the Department of Agriculture and Markets today.

Roy L. Gillett, state farm statistician, revealed that for three successive years the farm population has been steadily increasing.

Prior to 1930 the number of farmers had been decreasing steadily.

The new movement is receiving little encouragement from the state. Commissioner Charles H. Baldwin of the Department of Agriculture and Markets, is represented as opposed to a back to the farm movement in view of the difficulties confronting families already on the farms and the low prices of agricultural products.

Hundreds of other New Yorkers who contemplate joining the movement, have written to Commissioner Baldwin seeking his advice.

"They don't realize that they must have money to buy a farm and to obtain the necessary equipment," he said. "Most of the people who write to me have absolutely no money."

He said he believed many people who have never lived on farms were misled by magazine articles and political speeches pointing to the farms as the ultimate solution of the unemployment problem.

"Some of them actually believe the state has land, cows and chickens to give them," he said.

Roosevelt Closely Guarded on Return

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—Five wild shots by an assassin have just about closed the door of freedom to Franklin D. Roosevelt. The President-elect found today he is looking at the world through rows of blue-coats.

The throngs that lined the streets last night when he arrived home under an extraordinary guard of 1,000 policemen testified to their thankfulness that he had escaped death at Miami, and to their admiration of his coolness under fire.

Where one policeman stood a month ago in front of the Roosevelt home on East 65th street a squadron patrolled today. Although absolute order prevailed, the police, stirred to almost unprecedented precautions by Giuseppe Zangara and his hatred of "presidents and kings," were taking no chances.

The President-elect still was smiling and going ahead with the preparations for the presidency without any change in his daily routine. Meanwhile he kept in close touch with the Miami Hospital, where lie five victims of bullets intended for him.

In governmental affairs, selection of a cabinet was about the only thing demanding immediate attention by Mr. Roosevelt. He has his policies in mind and he has a very good idea of the men he wants to carry them into effect. Definite announcements were expected soon, probably next week.

Many Mourn Death Of Mrs. Robinson

New York, Feb. 18 (AP)—From all over the nation messages of condolences came today, mourning the death of a distinguished member of the many-branched Roosevelt family, Mrs. Corinne Roosevelt Robinson.

Mrs. Robinson, who was a sister of President Theodore Roosevelt and an aunt of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, died last night of pneumonia in her 72nd year.

Like her late brother, Mrs. Robinson had tremendous energy, which carried her into philanthropy, society, literature and politics. She was the widow of Douglas Robinson, wealthy real estate man.

She made the old Roosevelt residence in East Twentieth street a shrine for admirers of Theodore Roosevelt; campaigned for Liberty loans, the Salvation Army, the Red Cross and the Republican party; wrote several volumes of poetry and a book called "My Brother T. R."

Mayor Cermak Talks With His Daughter

Miami, Fla., Feb. 18 (AP)—Mayor Anton Cermak, recovering in Jackson Memorial Hospital from a bullet wound inflicted when Guiseppe Zangara attempted to assassinate President-elect Roosevelt, besieged his two daughters with questions when they visited him today.

The daughters are Mrs. Frank Jirka and Mrs. Richey Graham.

"Well," the mayor greeted them, "I see you are all here. How are you? How did you enjoy the trip down from Chicago?

"I see that you're all excited," he continued. "Where are the boys (referring to his grandsons)? You're looking fine. I feel fine."

Favors Far-Flung Railroad Reforms

President of Delaware & Hudson Asserts That Need For Adjustments Are Apparent On Every Hand.

Washington, Feb. 18. (AP.—Far-flung reforms by the railroads themselves, sweeping changes in regulatory laws and inclusion of competing carriers in them were advocated today before the senate finance committee, by L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson.

Loree, appearing in the committee's study of economic ills and ways to cure them, asserted "the need for adjustments are apparent on every hand," adding that "intelligently made, the railroads might rapidly assume their old-time efficiency and usefulness."

Specific points he called for were:

Adjustment of taxes, wages and working conditions.

Elimination of waste through the abandonment of all unused and obsolete facilities, and mileage no longer justified by traffic.

Development of essential railroad facilities to the highest state of efficiency, through improved grades, short-ening of lines and improvement of equipment.

Amelioration of the "five major hazards" to employes—sickness, accident, death, unemployment and superannuation.

Extend regulation by the interstate commerce commisison to all commerce and all carriers which the government has the power to regulate.

Give the "prosecuting" powers clearly to the Interstate Commerce Commission and put the "judging" clearly in the hands of the courts.

Repeal the clause of the interstate commerce laws providing for the recapture of "so-called excess earnings."

Do away with provisions for valuations. Loree asserting "the valuations have not been completed and all work done so far is condemned by decisions of the supreme court."

Remove restrictions upon control and operation of boats and other accessory services by railroads.

Eliminate commission powers to fix rate divisions except when carriers are unable to agree after a joint rate has been set.

Leave to the courts the power to award damages.

Repeal provisions preventing carriers from moving any commodities in which they have an interest except timber and its products.

Loree, in urging tax adjustments, asserted "prodigality (in governmental costs) is reflected in the taxes levied upon the people."

As for wages, he said that from 1900 to 1929, tonnage had increased 217 per cent and passengers 94.3 per cent, but wages had increased 409.3 per cent.

Measles Cases Are Increasing

Since the First of the Year 45 Cases Have Been Reported to Health Board—Dr. Sanford Gives Out Statement Regarding Situation.

As forecasted recently by Dr. L. E. Sanford, city health officer, Kingston is due for an epidemic of measles, and at the present time there have been 44 cases reported this month with one case reported in January. Dr. Sanford today issued the following statement:

As has been expected the number of new cases of measles has increased during the past week and to date we have 45 cases. Most of these are mild and there have been no fatalities. At a recent meeting of the Board of Health the following resolution was adopted, which parents are requested to note and carry out—If you have a case of measles in your home and there are other children in the home who have been exposed to it and who have not had the disease, they should be kept home from school and away from other children for a period of ten days. If at the end of that time they show none of the early symptoms of measles, which are, cold in the head, redness of the eyes and cough, they may then, with the permission of the Board of Health, return to school. In this way the spread of measles may be checked to some extent. Measles is so extremely contagious in the early stages, that if children are allowed to attend school until the eruptive stage is reached they will already have communicated the disease to all those with whom they have come in contact.

There is a supply of measles serum at the City Laboratory for the protection of delicate children under the age of three years. The protection period is short but even this may be of value in certain cases. Ask your family physician about it. All cases should be given the best medical and nursing care from the beginning and if this is done there will be little likelihood of fatalities or bad after effects.

CONFLICTING REPORTS ON JAPANESE CABINET ACTION

London, Feb. 18 (AP)—Two British Press Associations made conflicting reports today concerning Japanese cabinet action in Tokyo relative to the question of Japanese withdrawal from the League. An Exchange Telegraph Company dispatch said the cabinet decided in favor of withdrawal but a Reuters dispatch said the report was unfounded.

"Share-the-Work" Plan Successful In This Vicinity

The complete reports from the city chairmen in the sixth region of the Second Federal Reserve District on "Share-the-Work", which embraces the territory on both sides of the Hudson from Catskill to Yonkers and from the Connecticut border to Sullivan county, indicate that in this area thousands of employes have been added by concerns through the operation of the principles of "Share-the-Work." The completed figures on the communities we have so far received show added employment of 460 in Newburgh, 70 in Beacon, 215 in Kingston, 114 in Hastings, and 13 in Peekskill. The balance of the communities in the area have all received "Share-the-Work" very favorably and when completed reports are received the total will probably reach surprising proportions and be a very satisfactory result to all who have contributed to its success. In Tarrytown the Fisher body plant and the Chevrolet Motor Company, while there is no complete report, are fully cooperating in "Share-the-Work." In the city of Port Jervis, from which no definite figures have been received, the satisfactory information that so far as is possible by the exigencies of railroading, the entire Erie railroad system, which has its big repair shops in Port Jervis, is using the principles of "Share-the-Work" as are the other plants in the city. The same is true with the O. & W. employment in Middletown, which figures of February 11 reflect nearly normal employment of 1,100 men. The great gratification with which these figures are received would indicate that the principles of "Share-the-Work" are thoroughly sold, and the satisfaction with which they have been handled indicate that the concerns in the area that have adopted "Share-the-Work" will continue to reflect its benefits in employment during the remainder of the depression.

Delegate To Assist In Japan's Secession

Tokyo, Feb. 18 (AP).—A government summons to Yosuke Matsuoka, Japanese delegate at Geneva, to return here by way of Siberia, the shortest route, to assist in the final stages of Japan's secession from the League of Nations is likely to compel Matsuoka to abandon a projected trip to the United States, a government spokesman said today.

This matter was still unsettled but the cabinet might decide to consult Matsuoka personally before taking final action on withdrawal from the league, in which event the delegate will be called home immediately after the anticipated acceptance by the league assembly of its report on Manchuria next week.

The cabinet postponed further discussion of the league question until Monday, permitting Viscount Makoto Saito to present the decisions thus far reached to Prince Saionji, last surviving member of the council of the Genro. The highest seat of power in the Empire until a decade ago.

"It is safe to interpret the premier's visit to Prince Saionji as an indication that the cabinet has agreed to the main principles of a policy respecting the league: That is it had decided to withdraw unless a miracle prevents the assembly's adoption of the league report and recommendations," a high official told The Associated Press.

Japs Tell Chinese To Evacuate Jehol

Peiping, China, Feb. 18 (AP).—A major battle between Chinese and Japanese armies at Kailu, northern gateway of Jehol province, seemed imminent after the receipt today of a Japanese ultimatum.

The ultimatum ordered Chinese forces immediately to evacuate the city. The Chinese decided to ignore it, it was stated at Manchurian headquarters here, despite a Japanese threat to attack at once on non-compliance.

An army of from 30,000 to 50,000 volunteers has been concentrated in the Kailu region to block Japanese invasion of Jehol from that point.

The Japanese already have made at least a half dozen airplane bombing raids on Kailu from their military base at Tungliao. A series of these air raids occurred in late January and caused considerable damage in Kailu.

An official announcement said the Japanese ultimatum was addressed to "The Chinese Commander" at Kailu. Previous reports said General Chu Ching-Lin was in command in that area.

Among his troops were "Big Swords" and "Red Spears," colorful fighting outfits which served under General Ma Chan-Shan and General Su Ping-Wen in the Northern Manchuria fighting last year.

Treasury Receipts.

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP).—Treasury receipts for February 16 were $3,322,794.73; expenditures, $9,565,956.92; balance $336,246,284.92. Customs duties for sixteen days of February were $9,187,553.47.

French "Note" to Austria Stirs Italy

Italian Press Charges Alleged Ultimatum to Austria Concerning Arms Shipment Was "Camouflage."

Rome, Feb 18 (AP). The entire Italian press engaged in an attack on France today, charging an alleged ultimatum to Austria concerning an arms shipment from Italy was "camouflage" to distract attention from anti-Italian military preparations.

Denials that the arms were shipped to Austria for war purposes there were coupled with counter-charges that France was arming Czechoslovakia and Jugoslavia. The Giornale D'Italia of Rome and Premier Mussolini's own newspaper, Popolo D'Italia of Milan, were the most outspoken.

The so-called ultimatum, demanding the Austrian government get rid of the arms and supplies within two weeks, was published. Great Britain was reported to have approved the action by France on the grounds that the concentration of arms violated the post war peace treaty with Austria.

A Paris dispatch said the note to Austria was presented February 11 and was mainly in the nature of a request for information as to the state of arms shipments in Hungary.

The French government was reported to have demanded that Russia investigate whether part of the arms had been reshipped to Hungary, which since the accession of Premier Julius Goemboes has laid special stress upon its close relations with Italy.

It was demanded, the alleged text said, that Austria either obtain assurance of the entire reshipment of the arms to the point of origin or destroy them.

A Friendly Request.

London, Feb. 18 (AP).—Official quarters today confirmed that Great Britain and France had made joint representations to Austria that a recent arms shipment from Italy violated the treaty to St. Germain. The communication requested that the arms be returned to Italy or destroyed by a certain date.

It was stated that the note was in no sense an ultimatum, but was in the nature of a friendly request.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH WHEN BLAST WRECKS HOME

Olean, N. Y., Feb. 17 (AP)—Ten members of a family had a narrow escape from death today as an explosion wrecked the rear of their two-story home here.

David V. Stoner, a Pennsylvania Railroad employe, his wife and eight children were sleeping when the blast occurred, but all escaped injury. The rear of the house was torn away.

Police said neighbors told them Stoner had received threatening letters recently warning him to move out of the neighborhood because of the size of his family. The letters were said to have informed Stoner that his children were considered nuisances.

The investigation has not revealed the cause of the blast, police said.

KIDNAPED SALESMAN RELEASED UNHARMED

Kansis City, Feb. 18 (AP).—James C. Agnew, automobile salesman kidnaped by two men he thought were prospective buyers, was released unharmed today after being held captive 12 hours in a wooded suburb.

Robert Williams, 24, captured by police last night after he robbed a chain grocery office of $400, told officers he was one of the kidnapers. Police quoted him as saying he and a pal abducted the salesman to obtain use of the car for a robbery and that he left his accomplice as guard over Agnew. The accomplice escaped.

RHINEBECK WOMAN FATALLY INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb 18 (AP).—Calvin Jackson, 29, of Glens Falls, today was on parole on a charge of third degree assault in connection with an automobile accident here Thursday night in which Mrs. William H. Judson, wife of the president of the Rhinebeck National Bank, was fatally injured.

Jackson, police say, was driver of a truck into which the Judson automobile crashed while the former machine was stopped on the highway due to a blown fuse which extinguished the lights. Mr. Judson, who is 60, was critically hurt.

L. F. LOREE GIVES VIEWS BEFORE COMMITTEE

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP).—Railroads and means for loading them with full carcoes were studied by the senate finance committee today in its search for ways to bring back better times.

L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson, joined the notable list of economic, industrial, financial, labor and farm leaders who already have presented their views to aid the senators in their quest.

$43,000,000 INTEREST BILL SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

Expects New York to Be Among the First to Ratify Repeal Law

If Measure Ending Eighteenth Amendment Is Enacted by Congress Governor Lehman Says State Will Be Among First to Approve.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 18 (AP).—Governor Lehman expects New York state to "lose no time" in ratifying the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment if the repeal resolution approved by the Senate yesterday is passed by the House of Representatives.

Enroute by rail from Ithaca where he addressed a farm conference, to Trenton, N. J., for a conference of governors, the Governor predicted last night that New York will be one of the first states to ratify repeal.

"If Congress passes the repeal resolution," he told newspaper men aboard the train, "I hope and am confident that New York will lose no time putting itself on record as favoring repeal.

"The state will take such steps as may be necessary without any loss of time.

"I expect New York state to be among the first to vote to take the Eighteenth Amendment from the statute books."

A state commission is studying methods of liquor control to be enacted into law to take effect if and when prohibition is modified. It already has presented a plan for beer control.

Republican Wits Behind Repeal Move

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP).—Republican anti-prohibitionists organized their strength today behind the move which Congressional leaders are confident will carry the Senate-approved Blaine repealer through the House Monday.

The meeting of the wet bloc was called as party chieftains debated the convention method of ratification and surveyed the prospects for state action this year with more than 40 state legislatures holding assemblies.

Representative Rainey of Illinois, the Democratic leader, said the Blaine resolution for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment would be adopted by the House "by at least twenty votes."

The repealer is to be brought up Monday under suspension of the rules which means drastically limited debate and a quick vote.

The Democratic majority yesterday bound themselves in caucus to support it, a procedure which many asserted removed any doubt as to the final result.

Representative Snell of New York, the Republican leader, said between ten and twenty of his party who have voted dry would change. Representative Beck of Pennsylvania, head of the Republican wet bloc, said the Blaine resolution had the approval of his group. House adoption would send the measure to the states for ratification by the convention method, a system never before tried in approving amendemnts to the constitution.

Leaders today were occupied with the question whether it is the duty of the states or the federal government to call the conventions.

Sued Abramowitz Over a Fur Coat

Practically all of Friday's session of city court at the city hall was taken up by the hearing in the action brought by Mollie E. Simberg against Solomon Abramowitz, both of Albany avenue. The action was brought to recover for damages for a fur coat that the plaintiff had purchased of the defendant for the sum of $432. The plaintiff was represented by N. H. Fessenden with M. O. Auchmoody of counsel, while the defendant was represented by Emanuel Metzger.

From the evidence produced at the trial the plaintiff had purchased a caracul fur coat from the defendant, and she claimed that the fur did not remain black and was not of fast color, but a few months after the purchase had been made the fur turned brownish in spots.

The coat was produced in evidence. Several experts from New York city testified in the suit.

At the close of the case Judge Culloton reserved decision.

Heiselman, acting mayor of the city, has called a special meeting of the Common Council for Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock for the purpose of acting on a resolution empowering him to sign the city bonds authorized at a recent meeting of the council. Sanity Commission To Examine Zangara; Defer Arraignment

No Apparent Attempt at Demonstration Against Zangara When He Is Brought Into Court—Each Spectator Searched.

Miami, Fla., Feb 18 (AP).—The county solicitor's office announced today that Giuseppe Zangara would not be arraigned today on charges of attempting to assassinate President-elect Roosevelt.

The announcement was made after Zangara, heavily guarded by five deputies who towered high above his tiny frame, was brought into the court room to answer charges of attempting to kill President-elect Roosevelt and three other persons at a reception for Mr. Roosevelt in Bay Front Park Wednesday night.

Two of the deputies sat beside Zangara. The other three stood at his back, facing the crowd that jammed the court room on the sixth floor of the courthouse.

Prior to entry into the court room, each spectator was searched for weapons by deputies.

Judge E. C. Collins set 10 o'clock for the hearing.

He said the postponement was made at the request of County Solicitor Charles A. Morehead, in order that a sanity commission may examine Zangara.

"The jury panel has been drawn, and nothing more can be done at this time," Judge Collins said as he adjourned court.

Zangara immediately was taken back to his cell in the county jail. The spectators, orderly throughout the brief session, filed quietly out of the court room with no apparent attempt at a demonstration against the Italian.

When court opened Morehead made the following statement:

"At 9:35 o'clock this morning, Mr. Twyman and Mr. McCaskill, defense attorneys, called me and said they had not yet received the report from physicians who examined the defendant; that they will have received the report by 10 o'clock, Monday; that they expected to receive it this morning, and that they would study it and be ready for trial Monday morning. They requested that I convey this report to your honor this morning.

Judge Collins set the trial for 10 o'clock Monday morning.

"The jury has already been drawn and will be on hand so nothing further can be done at this time," the judge said.

The guards took Zangara back to jail.

"The actual trial of this man will proceed Monday morning if he pleads not guilty," Morehead stated after the brief court session today.

"If he pleads guilty, he probably will be sentenced at once.

"I have not been advised whether Zangara will plead guilty or not guilty by reason of insanity. The defense attorneys told me they would receive the medical commission's report this afternoon and would notify me then of their decision on the plea."

George Brazee Used A Razor

West Hurley Man Called on Friends on Hone Street and Asked If He Could Spend the Night—Friends Heard Him Groan and Found He Had Slashed Himself.

Friday evening George Brazee, 46, of West Hurley, called at the home of some friends at 85 Hone street and asked if he could spend the night with them. They assured him he could and showed him to a bedroom.

Later he was heard groaning in his room and running in they found him bleeding profusely with both wrists badly slashed with a razor.

The police department was called, and the ambulance rushed the wounded man to the Kingston Hospital, where he received medical attention. This morning his condition was reported as fairly good, and it is thought that he will pull through. He lost considerable blood before the wounds were closed.

Colombia Appeals to League of Nations

Geneva, Feb. 18 (AP).—Colombia appealed to the League of Nations today to intervene in its dispute with Peru over possession of the Upper Amazon port, Leticia, invoking Article XV of the League covenant, whereby the League would seek a settlement by conciliation.

Colombia's appeal was conveyed in a three-page message, setting forth the situation and accusing Peru of taking action in violation of its League engagement.

A special League council session was convoked for next Monday afternoon to hear appeals.

League officials were discussing plans to dispatch a Leticia commission of inquiry to South America similar to the Lytton commission which investigated the Manchurian dispute between China and Japan. Officials believe this course is likely to be recommended by the council in case the United States government is agreeable.

FRANCES WILLARD DAY OBSERVED BY W. C. T. U.

New Paltz, Feb. 18.—Frances Willard Day was observed during the program at the meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union on Wednesday afternoon, February 15, held at the home of Mrs. Abel Quick on Grove street. The devotionals were in charge of the evangelistic director, Mrs. Morgan Coutant, who led in prayer, which was followed by all with the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. Hiram Relyea read the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" with much expression. Scripture for Frances Willard Memorial Day was read from the Union Signal in unison. The date of the meeting being so close to Lincoln's Birthday, several readings in his memory were given. Mrs. Coutant read an article of Lincoln when he received the notification to the presidency by the committee from the Republican convention of June 19, 1860, how he pledged them his sincerest respects in a glass of cold water, this ending the devotionals.

President Mrs. Ida Stephens presided. Roll was called by the secretary and each member present responded with quotations of Frances Willard. Minutes of the past meeting were read and approved. Treasurer's report accepted. Communications were read. Reports of directors were given. The president reported that 60 cans of fruit donated by our union had been taken to the Industrial Home in Kingston. All were pleased to know that the vice president, Mrs. Hiram Relyea, had called on the county president, Mrs. J. Albert Palen, in Wallkill, but were very sorry to hear of her illness. Under new business, the annual county luncheon was discussed. The local union has secured the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church to serve the luncheon in the church on Wednesday, March 1, at 12:30. The W. C. T. U. state president, Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, will be the speaker. All wishing to attend may notify the president, Mrs. Ida Stephens, or vice president, Mrs. Hiram Relyea, this coming week.

The afternoon's program began with a reading of "The Life of Frances Willard," by S. B. Ewin, which was read by Mrs. Mauterstock. Other readings were given by several members in memorial of Miss Willard. The Willard Memorial fund offering was taken. Mrs. Hiram Relyea gave brief sketches of other items in the Union Signal which was very interesting. Mrs. Robert L. Mauterstock gave the invitation to meet at the Methodist parsonage at the regular meeting on March 15, which was accepted.

The column, printed free, grows longer each week.

But the exam is six hours long, making it a physical impossibility to read enough during the period to answer the questions. What's more, they're asking questions now that are based on non-text book knowledge.

AMERICA'S 10 BIGGEST PROBLEMS

No. 10

Happiness—A Public Policy

This is the last of a series of articles in which Prof. William Fielding Ogburn of the University of Chicago discusses what he considers the 10 biggest problems facing America.

By WILLIAM FIELDING OGBURN
Research Director, President's Committee on Recent Social Trends.
(Written for The Associated Press)

Happiness never has been considered as a social problem. It has been the theme of the philosopher and the poet, but it never has been attacked by science. Indeed, the comment of the misguided moralists has been: "The more you seek it the less you find it."

There has been no platform in the Republican or the Democratic party on this subject. Yet it is the one thing we all crave.

While many persons will think it highly fanciful to discuss the question of increasing happiness and probably will condemn anyone attempting such a discussion as an impractical idealist, yet I doubt if anyone would be so bold as to say the happiness of our people cannot be increased.

If science should investigate the subject the most probable hypothesis of approach would I think, center around affection. Such would certainly be the advice of the novelist.

The affectional side of a people clusters around marriage and the family. One in every six marriages will end in divorce. Yet, curiously enough, about three out of every four marriages at any one time are found to be happy marriages.

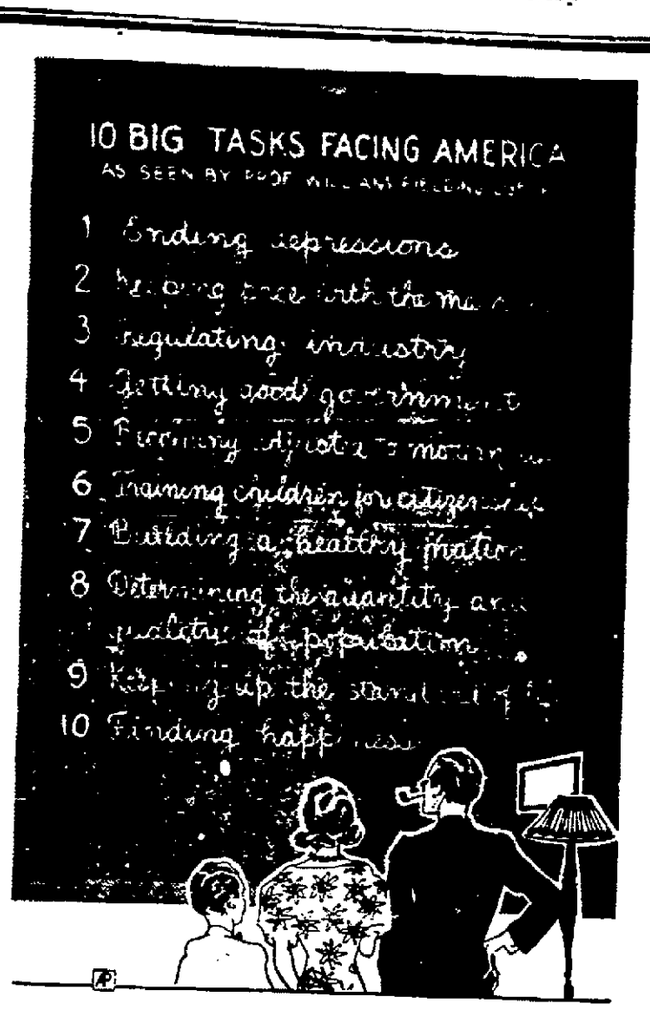
Family Problems Studied

The attempt to deal with family problems by the clergy, by the physicians, by the courts, and by a growing number of social agencies and institutions is meeting with considerable success.

It seems probable they will throw a great deal of light on forces and factors which play a part in producing happiness or unhappiness. It seems very probable that family problems will throw a great deal of light on the question of happiness.

Another great agency operating in society today and placing the pursuit of happiness in the realm of public policy is the mental hygiene movement.

That the mental and emotional habits of a large number of people are extremely bad is just being recognized, and we are just beginning to learn some of the hygienic principles which will prevent such a state.



10 BIG TASKS FACING AMERICA
AS SEEN BY DOCTOR WILLIAM FIELDING OGBURN
1 Ending depressions
2 Dealing with the machine
3 Regulating industry
4 Getting good government
5 Reducing disputes among nations
6 Training children for citizenship
7 Building a healthy nation
8 Determining the quantity and quality of population
9 Keeping up the standard of living
10 Finding happiness

Here are the ten biggest problems confronting the nation in the opinion of Prof. William Fielding Ogburn of the University of Chicago. Happiness is ranked by Professor Ogburn as a major problem because everyone craves it. It can be increased, he thinks.

The task of mental hygiene is a very large one and I imagine it will be many decades before success will be conspicuous, but their efforts should be aided by society in every way possible.

Work Affords Happiness

The family does not offer the only background against which happiness may be observed. Many are said to find happiness in work. At least some do not find it a toil and take a great interest in it. There are certainly types of work which are a source of joy and happiness also.

Happiness is to be found for many in religion and it is true that for a large proportion of mankind religion does bring a peace and abiding joy.

One other foci of forces that make for hapiness is the years of childhood. The capacity for happiness or unhappiness is determined somewhat by the formation of our personality in the early years of our life. This is an important enough problem as to be the theme of a separate discussion.

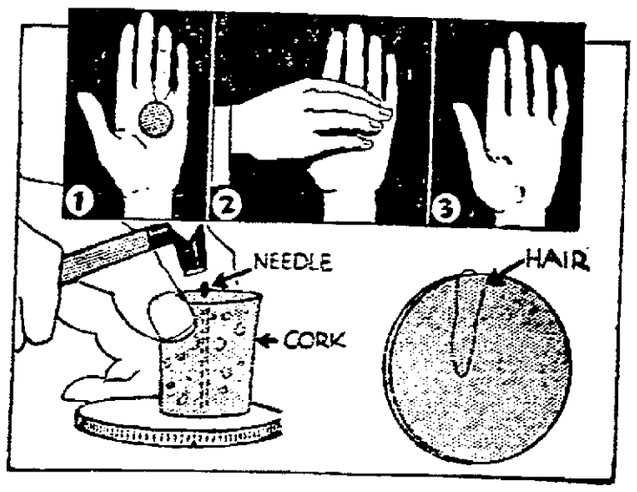
New York's Huge Union Inland Freight Station

THIS is the immense $16,000,000 Commerce building just completed by the Port of New York authority to house the first union inland freight station and recently opened. Among the interesting features it contains are the largest truck elevators ever made, which have been installed for the use of commercial tenants of the upper floors.

The number of motor vehicles registered in Iowa on November 1 was 66,840 below the total for the same date in 1931.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

EXPLAINS TRICK OF MAKING QUARTER DISAPPEAR



A tiny hole must be drilled through a quarter, and a light colored hair inserted in the hole and the ends tied together before you can do this trick. The hole can be drilled in this manner: Get a strong needle and a cork a little less in height than the needle, shove the needle through the cork, letting the point protrude just a little from the end, and the cork will prevent the needle from breaking. You then slowly and carefully tap the needle with a hammer, and after the hole is drilled, insert and tie the hair, and you are ready for the trick. Place the hair loop over one of your fingers, letting it support the quarter in the palm of your hand, which you hold upright before the audience. Pass your other hand over the quarter, and as you do so, push it between the fingers to the back of the hand, where it will hang by the hair. Then display both palms to the audience, and the quarter will have vanished. It can be restored by again passing the hand over the palm where the quarter was last seen and bring it back through the fingers.

EXPENSIVE CHILD.

Seven-year-old Lucy Cotton Thomas of New York, who cannot live comfortably on $3,000 a month, may seem like an enviable child, as one thinks of the many little children who do not have enough food or clothing and of others who go to work before their school and play days are properly over. The itemized monthly expense list which Lucy's mother submitted to a court in her effort to have Lucy's meager allowance from a trust fund increased to $3,800 a month is interesting. It contains such items as rent for a Fifth avenue apartment; chauffeur, maid service and incidentals; storage of auto and garage charges; both a governess and private school tuition; gifts and "gratuities to servants;" laundry, cleaning, electricity and telephone, traveling expenses, insurance, storage and cartage; French, music and dancing lessons; drugs, flowers, stationery and books. The clothing item alone calls for $300 a month. The mother told the court that her own expenses came to more than $20,000 a year and that she would be unable to defray more than a part of Lucy's expenses.

Ho-hum! It is our guess that Lucy often looks out of her apartment windows or out of the windows of her car and wishes she could cut loose with some of the ordinary kids she sees playing in the street. But perhaps she doesn't. Perhaps at the age of seven she agrees with her mother that all these things are essential to her well-being, and regards the court as an old meanie for not increasing her allowance $800 a month as requested.

ELECTION SIDESHOW

A useless constitutional ritual was gone through with the other day in Washington, when the votes of the presidential electors were presented to the president of the United States Senate and the result of their "deliberations" was announced by him, amid irrepressible snickers, to the Senate and House sitting in joint session. Some one has compared this formal and anachronistic custom with some of those quaint affairs in which the British still indulge—such as changing the guard at Buckingham Palace and the ceremony of the King's Keys at the Tower of London. So far as hollow form is concerned, it may be true that we have as many such as the British. This canvassing of presidential electors' votes happens to be a recent and therefore conspicuous example.

There is one great difference, however, between our cherished anachronisms and those of the Mother Country. The British functions of this type are usually picturesque and colorful. British taxpayers get a fine show for their money in the brilliant costumes of Guards and Beefeaters. There is nothing very entertaining to Americans in the concluding scenes of a presidential election, even when the participants giggle in the performance of their sham duties.

There is said to have been consternation at Washington the other day when it developed that a new Federal Forestry building in Utah didn't have a stick of wood in it. Fortunately the building wasn't completed. The architect, hastily summoned, was ordered to get a little lumber into it somehow. He did, and the day was saved. The published story does not tell what the building was made of. Presumably it was brick or stone. Sheet steel construction, now making some headway in the East, even for residences and public buildings, has not penetrated yet to the big timber states, except for occasional garages or small, fireproof shelters. The lumber men are somewhat worried in recent years about the growing use of brick, stone, steel and cement. The country, however, is still consuming timber far faster than it can grow trees. And though new fashions may displace wood for many of its former uses, there is little danger that a building material so beautiful, light, strong, weather-resisting and easily shaped will ever lose its appeal. Look at the vogue lately for plain white pine boards with the knots showing.

Give the professors credit for a sense of humor, for modesty and for a little wisdom. When the president of the Chicago Stockyards Company not long ago made the blanket assertion that professors are a "bunch of cowards" and "one of the chief curses of the country" and added that "the sooner we get away from their influence, the better," many professor got sore. Reporters scurried from door to door to get the profs' reactions. There were no fireworks. Chuckles and suggestions that no comment was necessary were about as far as the professors went. One of them made the neat concession, "Surely some professors are meddlers and busybodies, just as some financiers are crooks." A little of their academic calm would be beneficial in other circles where calling names and making faces in public have become almost habitual.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

GLAND TYPES OF OVERWEIGHT

It has been proven by careful research work that 95 to 97 of every 100 overweight individuals are themselves responsible for the great increase in their weights. They simply eat too much food, take little or no exercise, and sleep or rest too much.

What about the 3 to 5 per cent who are not responsible for their tendency to overweight.

It is caused by certain glands of the body which fail to manufacture enough juice to use or burn up the food that is eaten.

There is one type of this glandular overweight where the individual is "fat" all over the body—legs, arms, trunk, and between the organs in the abdomen. There is a waxy appearance of the skin and a fineness of hair on the head and over the body. In these cases it is believed that the thyroid gland in the neck is at fault causing it to do a little less work than it should.

In these cases the use of the extract of the thyroid gland gives excellent results, but of course should be taken under the supervision of a physician.

Another type of overweight is where there is no extra fat on the arms, legs, back and neck, but a great increase about the hips, the abdomen, and the breasts. This type of overweight while not seen as frequently as the thyroid type, nevertheless is not uncommon, and many women try wearing special rubber corsets about the hips and abdomen in an endeavor to melt off the fat in this region, as they feel that with their small hands and arms, and slender legs fat should not accumulate anywhere on the body.

This type of overweight is due to the fact that the little gland lying on the base of the skull—the pituitary gland—it not making enough pituitary juice.

Here also, the use of pituitary gland extract is of help, given under a physician's direction.

However you can readily see how a slight disturbance of the gland which puts on a "little" extra weight might readily cause the individual to feel a little less like working or exercising, and a little more like sleeping or resting with the result that by continuing to eat a good daily supply of food the fat would increase at a very rapid rate.

Thus it is always wise, even in the gland type of overweight, to increase the exercise and decrease the food intake.

Plans Progressing For Legion Dinner

Plans for the third annual stag dinner of the Ulster County American Legion are gradually being completed. The committee in charge has again selected the popular Golden Rule Inn for this gala occasion, scheduled for February 28.

The list of prominent guests will include Dr. George H. Lawrence, New York State Commander of the Legion; Captain John L. Hoffman of Napanoch who is chairman of the prison committee of the state department; Maurice Stember of New York, department adjutant;; Edward J. Neary of Nassau, Samuel Aronowitz of Albany and Arthur Brundage of Newburgh, all of whom are past department commanders; John Lowther of Saugerties, third district chairman; Cliff Novelli, department service officer; Appellate Court Justice Walter N. Bliss and several others.

As in previous years, demand for tickets, the number available being limited to 400, is quite brisk. Reports from all over the third district, which includes several counties in the vicinity, would indicate that representative delegations will attend. Ralph Washington, a prominent Legionnaire of Monticello and well and favorably known locally, telephoned yesterday that he had disposed of the tickets that were sent to him and that he will probably need more. Marlborough Post has also sent word it will send a big delegation, practically the post's entire membership.

The Golden Rule Inn stag party is open not only to Legionnaires but also to their friends and the committee extends a cordial invitation to all to attend. Tickets can be secured at various stores and a supply is also available at the Legion building.

Lester C. Elmendorf, chairman of arrangements at the Inn, promises an excellent dinner and Meyer Kaplan, who has the entertainment in charge, also plans something novel for the assembled crowd.

In addition to the above-named chairman, Robert K. Browning, county commander; C. J. Helselmann, treasurer of the committee; Morten Finch, ticket committee chairman, and P. J. Beichert, general chairman, complete the committee in charge.

An invitation was extended to Joseph V. McKee, president of the Board of Aldermen of the city of New York, but because of ill health it will be impossible for him to attend.

VALIANT DUST

SYNOPSIS: Post One of the Foreign Legion in the Mekarzen territory is being relieved. Under Major Rissuli it will march to the citadel of the Kasd of Mekarzen, an easily surprised Kaid, there to parley with the Kasd. Rissuli, a long record of treachery behind, plans to betray France to the Kasd, and having gotten his legionaires into the citadel under pretense of parleying, with the Kasd, counter France, plans further to murder the Kasd, seize the citadel for himself, and to become the Sultan Rissuli. Rissuli fears only the English in his command led by Geke Rollins, and three French pals "Tant de Soif" and Père Poussin.

Chapter 12

THE LEGION MARCHES

HAVING sounded their call in the center of the post, the buglers marched to the gate and again sounded the "assembly," outside the post. They then marched right round the walls sounding their strident urgent call to each of the other three points of the compass.

"Do put on a moo record. That one's gettin' wore out," observed Sailor Harris as he stuffed a small kit into his sack.

"Wore out!" grunted William Bossum, rolling spare boots in blanket and tent-canvas that he proceeded to strap to his knapsack. "I reckon it's broke. They broke it. Yus . . . they broke the record," he chuckled. "Playin' it five times round five square yards to five men and a boy."

"Bli'me! A joke!" observed Sailor Harris in an annoying manner.

"You break the record for speed, my lad, or you'll be in for it," urged Joe Mummery, as he spun round and round winding twelve feet of broad woollen belt about his middle . . .

In the cook-house soup is being hastily prepared and loaves of bread laid out for distribution.

The tightly packed sacks, and the rifles are brought out and, by each man, laid in the place where he will fall in.

Once again the bugles sound, and almost immediately everybody is in his place, and the roll is called. Cartridges are distributed, the quartermaster and his orderlies issue reserve rations to each man, two tins, a pound of corned beef and a pound of biscuits. Each man also receives a little bag of coffee, one of salt and one of sugar.

Major Riccoli mounts his horse.

The men stand silent and steady as a rock, buglers ten paces to the right.

The Senegalese come to attention. Their guard present arms.

Forward! March!

The buglers strike up the March of the Legion and once more the Legion marches.

Always the Legion marches . . .

Some feel that Major Napoleon Riccoli is being a little excessive. They have every intention of marching—when on the way to billets in a real town, and all the joys thereof.

If all his men would not follow him to the Gates of Hell and through them, as he is fond of boasting, they will certainly follow him to the Gates of Mekarzen and through them.

But it is a weary march across the burning waterless desert that is one of the chief factors in the impregnability of Mekarzen: most powerful of the defences that had kept the country inviolate since the days when the great Shereefian warrior ancestor of the Kaid conquered and colonized it, centuries before his descendants conquered and colonized Spain.

A weary march, needing no human enemies (in alliance with those of heat, thirst and sandstorms) to render it almost impossible.

How long ago it seemed to the over-strained, heat-stricken men, since the detachment of Senegalese infantry arrived at the post and took over charge: how long since their own bugles blew the assembly.

As usual, it was the aged and alcoholic Tant de Soif who could find breath for song and conversation.

"Do you know what we are?" he asked, as the column halted and flung itself down for its ten minutes' rest, at the sound of Major Riccoli's whistle.

Sailor Harris's reply is better unrecorded.

"Speak for yourself," rebuked Tant de Soif. "I will tell you what we are—as distinguished from yourself. We are sheep. Sheep. I say—and I don't like it."

"We are being absolutely shepherded along. There are at least four scouts in touch with us. I don't like it, I say. I have lived for France and desire to go on living for France. I have no wish to die for her. And when I have to do so, I prefer to die discreetly—and in the newspapers, if you know what I mean—like the heroes of Camaron."

"Die in the newspapers!" grinned Père Poussin. "Personally I'd prefer to die in the canteen."

"Live there, you mean."

"What's this about being shepherded along?" asked Joe Mummery.

"Have you seen no cloud of dust on the horizon, every now and then, and from almost every direction?" asked Tant de Soif. "Haven't you seen suspicious-looking riders, in twos and threes, suddenly appear above a sand-dune and quickly disappear? Haven't you seen a solitary scout, sitting like a graven image, on a racing camel, at dawn of every day since we left the post?"

"No, I haven't," stated Père Poussin.

"No? Well, you should march with your eyes open, instead of staggering along half-asleep, bent double and with your eyes on the ground—as though you were looking for your lost innocence."

"Oh, shut up, you old wind-bag."

"You leaky wine-skin, be quiet . . .

"All the same—I don't like it," persisted Tant de Soif.

"Go and tell the Major you don't—and let us sleep."

A sudden cry from a sentry who extends a pointing arm.

A blast from the whistle . . . A shouted order . . .

In less than a minute the struggling, sprawling, recumbent column is in position, prepared to receive cavalry or anything else.

A whirlwind, consisting of buff, white, brown and grey camels ridden by yelling, rifle-brandishing men in flowing and fluttering white clothing, sweeps down upon the bayonet-bristling double rank, on the flank of which Major Riccoli sits, cool and steady, on his horse.

"Wait for it," he cries, as a few rifles are raised from the "ready" to the "present."

It was a wild fierce charge, and if the tribesmen come on, the men must be swept away, stamped flat.

The strain is terrible. The instinct of self-preservation strong.

A man throws his rifle up to his shoulder—and a sergeant kicks him so violently from behind that he almost falls.

"Steady—you wretched recruit," he growls. "Wait for it."

"This is madness," observes Tant de Soif as the avalanche surges down upon the thin khaki line.

But there is method in Major Riccoli's madness.

Suddenly, a man who has throughout kept ahead of the charging horde, throws up his hand, and instantly the company divides and wheels, one half to the left, the other to the right, and instead of overwhelming the soldiers and trampling them into sand, out-flanks them on either wing, surrounds and envelops them.

The leader rides up to Major Riccoli, laughs and salutes in semi-military fashion.

"Good morning, Major," says he, in excellent French. "You were expecting us?"

"I was, Prince Raisul," he replies. "My men were not . . . You have thus already seen something of their steadiness and discipline."

"Quite good, my dear Major."

"Yes, I am glad that neither you nor any man of yours was shot. One may observe that you took a risk, Prince Raisul."

"Oh, I like taking risks, don't you? . . . I too am glad for all your—our—sakes that no one was shot . . ."

From that hour the "military mission" was undoubtedly shepherded as Tant de Soif had said, or escorted as Raisul said, on the remainder of its roundabout and terrible journey—roundabout because no one whosoever was allowed to approach France-defying, Spain-defying, Europe-defying Mekarzen, by the direct and secret route through oasis and mountain pass: terrible because of the incredible heat, lack of water and looseness of the soft and shifting sand . . .

And one morning, a day or two later, the red tired eyes of the weary marchers were gladdened by the sight, upon the far horizon, of the minarets and domes of the city of Mekarzen, rising from a sea of palms that appeared in the shimmering light to flow about the base of the mighty cliff of rock, on the summit of which was perched the great citadel Castle of Mekarzen, impregnable, inviolate, virgin even to that day.

(Copyright, 1932, F. A. Stokes Co.)

The Legion finds an amazing situation, Monday, in Mekarzen.

Warm Morning

Little Miles liked to play out in the cold and snow so well that he often stayed out till his toes and fingers ached. Then he would come in crying and mother would have to rub his hands and feet to relieve the pain. She told him he must quit staying out till he got so cold, but he continued to stay out too long and came in crying. At last his mother told him she would spank him the next time he came in crying. One cold morning a few days later, the little fellow came in wringing his hands and with tears running down his cheeks and a sob in his voice, he said:

"Oh! Mother! I'm not crying. I'm just laughing. It's pretty warm this morning."

"Light blue snow" at Canton, Ohio, was attributed to chemicals in the air originating from nearby industrial plants.

Gerard Nisi's daily setting-up exercise is really a very strenuous bending down workout, for he maintains a daily average of 1,850 times bending over with knees locked, to touch his toes with his clenched fists. Nisi has kept this up—together with exhibitions—for 14 years, and has bent over in this manner more than 10,000,000 times.

The 1,850 times a day exercise takes an average of 37 minutes. At an exhibition in 1931, Nisi did 2,200 bends a day for six months, with an average time of 45 minutes. He lost two pounds a day during the workout, but in the end weighed 35 pounds more. The exhibition diet included from two to four quarts of milk a day.

His record for endurance and speed was made in Olympic Park, Irvington, N. J., when he bent to touch his toes 3,125 times in 64 minutes and 11 seconds.

The sheep, like some other animals, can go longer without water than the camel, which somehow gained the fame for its so-called ability to go without water. The sheep, however, really can go without a drink for weeks at a time, provided its feeding grounds have enough succulent grass. The sheep can live on desert grasslands which would not support any other domesticated animal.

Secret Service Eyes To Guard Inaugural

Washington (AP).—On Inauguration Day, unless plans are changed, an automobile guarded more carefully than any gold-laden armored car will swing out of the White House drive promptly at 11 o'clock.

In it will be the man with one more hour to serve as the nation's chief executive, and at his side the man who is to fill that office for the next four years.

Behind the car which carries President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt to the capitol for the inaugural ceremony will be two other automobiles—possibly more—filled with quietly dressed men whose eyes will search the faces of everyone along the line of march.

Vigilance Redoubled

They will be the secret service men whose one duty is to guard the safety of the President. Fresh in their minds will be the desperate attempt made upon the life of the President-elect at Miami. They will be alert for the slightest suspicious movement in the crowds.

The attempted assassination at Miami, the capital assumes, will cause a redoubling of the intensive precautions which always surround the President, and which are never more thorough than at the inaugural ceremonies.

At noon, as President-elect Roosevelt takes the oath of office, the watchfulness will focus on him but take in also the slightest gesture of anyone close to him.

It is customary, after the inaugural ceremony, for one secret service man to accompany the out-going executive to the train as a mark of courtesy. It is considered quite likely that this bit of etiquette will be something more than that this year, and that an enlarged detail will accompany President Hoover to his train.

Guarded Throughout Term

The others of the secret service detail will escort the new President to the White House, and for the next four years will spend their waking hours not far from Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Three secret service men already had been assigned to guard the President-elect at the "Little White House" at Warm Springs, Ga., before the Miami attempt at assassination. Six others have been stationed at the White House to guard President Hoover, and at least two usually accompany Mrs. Hoover.

Whether the White House staff of secret service guards is enlarged or not as a measure of added precaution, it may undergo some shifts of personnel after March 4 since Gus Gemerich, personal attendant to Roosevelt will accompany him here.

Veteran Has Served 25 Years

In any case the staff is quite certain to include Richard Jervis, chief of the White House secret service staff, who has been at the White House the last 25 years. Nor are the changes likely to include Col. E. W. Starling or George Dresher, also old-timers.

It has been Starling's customary duty to precede presidents on their trips about the country. He has arranged, ahead of time, the personnel of police details, looked over the exact route the president would travel, and quietly investigated all the people expected to be most closely associated with him during the visit, even including newspapermen who would have to talk to him.

Keep 24-Hour Guard

The chief executive never leaves the White House without some of the secret service agents nearby. The precaution has not always been part of the formalities surrounding the President. It was put into force following the assassination of President McKinley.

Roosevelt will find two or three of the agents always stationed just outside his office in the west wing of the White House. Even when he sits down to a quiet family dinner or goes to sleep there will be one of these watchful, taciturn men, stationed just outside the door of the room.

The Cub Reporter Jots Them Down

Old Timers Wonder If War Time Gardens Will Become Fashion in Spring For Unemployed to Plant and Raise Vegetables—Why Abolish Prize Fighting.

With spring only a few short weeks away several men were discussing the unemployment problem and one of them raised the question if there would be the revival of the fashion of war time gardens. It will be recalled that during the World War period many Kingston residents who had never gardened before struggled manfully to raise crops of vegetables for home consumption.

One man said it would not be a bad idea if unemployed men were given the use of vacant land in the city to plant potatoes and other vegetables and in that way would be assured of having something in the cellar for winter use when summer ended.

The only trouble is that a man who is willing to plant a garden is about as handy at that game as a baby would be to play basketball. It is easy enough to dig up the ground even if you have a stiff back said one man, but raising vegetables means more than just putting them in the ground.

Still unless conditions pick up it would not be such a bad idea at that for every one who could to have a vegetable garden this summer.

Since the death of Schaaf as the result of a recent prize fight there has been raised the usual agitation of doing away with prize fighting. What would be more to the point would be to only match men who were of the same size physically. The idea of matching a man who outweighed the other by many pounds is foolish on the face of it.

The snow storm of last Saturday has proven a fine windfall for many otherwise idle men who have received three days work and pay in helping to remove snow from the streets.

The snow storms of today, however, do not measure up to the storms of twenty and thirty years ago. Those were the days when houses were surrounded by fences and the snow would come up over the fence and small boys armed with shovels would spend hours cleaning off the sidewalks.

Men of today recall the years when they were boys and of the deep snows of those early winters.

Winters of late years seem to grow milder with less and less snow, but the older a man gets the less he objects to that fact.

Nowadays the only ones who get a real kick out of winter and its snows are the children with their sleds.

Unfortunately the hazards of coasting today are vastly greater than in the days of the horse and sleigh, and it is positively dangerous to allow children to coast down any of the hills in the city owing to auto traffic.

Three presidents of the University of Toledo died within a space of six years.

FASHIONS BY ELEANOR GUNN

Frills and Sheers for the Eternally Feminine

New York—The "forgotten woman" is the subject of our fashion lesson for today—that is the nearly forgotten woman. She who refuses to accept man's attire. Her name is legion. It's amusing for her to wear a tailleur—with feminine accessories, tailored but still feminine, but she will have none of the extremes being practiced at the moment. She does not covet man's attire and has no intention of copying it.

There is and was and probably always will be the dainty woman who adores frills. She is agog over the prospect of wearing ruches and flounces and all the sartorial coquetries of her sex. She hails chiffons with delight, glad they are in fashion again and she is thrilled with the possibilities of wearing a flower trimmed hat and veil.

It's smart to be stylish, but it's a positive joy to be permitted to wear pretty things again, to be able to choose the becoming ones instead of those awfully smart things that usually are unflattering.

The short puffed sleeve is one of the girlish things slender women are glad to wear. Women who are not slender are grateful for the variety of sleeve styles not necessarily dependent on fulness.

Draperies are as different as the sheer materials in which they appear. They are not restricted to slender women, but may be handled according to the figure. It is particularly important to have a becoming neckline. If a draped one will accomplish the trick better than turned over collars or other boyish things, then draped lines should be used.

The very popular, light above and dark below the waist type of dress, appears in still another version—the sheer above type, often used in one light and dark color scheme.

The necessity for severely molded bodice is not urgent. One may wear rather blousy things if it seems best although structural lines are more often accented. There is little change in waistlines.

Morning, Noon, and Night Fashions

Rhinestone-studded slit back cape gives covered shoulders to a classic white rough crepe evening gown of slenderly molded silhouette.

Perwenche cire chiffon is adapted to formal styling favoring soft fulness in the shirred sides and draped neckline.

Buckles alternating rows of white and sapphire blue stones decorate tie belt and shoulders.

Demure and at the same time trim, an informal costume combines plaid organdie top in guimpe treatment with dress of maize linen. The multi-color plaid organdie reappears in shallow-crowned, tilted brim hat.

Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild.

The afternoon frock is of almond green rabbit hair woolen; the little suit is in light blue woolen, with gray fox; and the evening gown is entirely of sheer black velvet crinkled in shirred pattern.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

The usual rumors before the openings are circulating, and this season they are chiefly concerned with colors. Daffodil green, yellow, and a deep ice cream pink are among the shades that are mentioned.

Milliners are emphasizing multi-color ribbon trimmings, often in crude combinations, such as yellow, vivid green and black, or else a combination like orange, green and navy.

Talbot combines pale gray with turquoise cloth of which colors are high style favorites), using this combination for one of her high-crowned Directoire sailors.

Tiny crin horsehair veils and tortoise shell motifs are among the smart milliners trimmings.

Many suits are developed in plain colors, in close stitches suggesting tapestry, and accompanied by cotton blouses; sometimes the blouses are solidly hand-knitted, with short sleeves and turn-over collars.

A feature now is white cotton hand-knit collars that are detachable, and are like a narrow shoulder cape-let; these appear on dark woolen suits, accompanied by fabric gloves with the same knitted cotton cuffs suggesting jacket cuffs.

Mannequins carry hand-knit bags and wear three-cornered knitted caps.

The sailor receives much encouragement and is shown in effective plaid straws as well as solid colors.

Stitched taffeta is sponsored in small hats for town wear which may or may not have flower trimmings. Many of these are very youthful, with narrow brims dipped close to the hair in back, or with shallow square crowns worn fairly straight.

Among the formal types, flower toques are featured, particularly for afternoon wear, some fashioned of flat petals and complemented by a veil.

Another crown which is being maintained and strengthened is the paper bag of Schiaparelli which is appearing in a number of different versions.

Peggy Joyce Interprets The Mode

Evening, Teatime, Play Costumes Follow The Style Clock 'Round

Peggy Hopkins Joyce's costumes are stirring fresh ripples in the Hollywood style currents. Here the actress displays some of the clothes that have made conversation at movie premieres and elsewhere. For evening she has chosen a voluminous jacket of snowy ermine to wear with a simple frock of rough white crepe (left). Black velvet and silver fox compose the teatime costume in the center, and on the right is her beach frock in cerise and white stripes. The sun hat is natural leghorn with a stencil flower on the brim.

FASHIONS by ELEANOR GUNN

Jackets Lend Glamour to Formal Frocks

Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild.

Varied fabrics and varied styles make the "little separate jacket" as well as the ensemble variety go on forever.

There is nothing which is so revitalizing to the old evening frock, "worn to death," as the cute jacket especially if it does tricks.

The three sketched above have been seen worn recently. They include one in yellow moire with a neckline and back like an opening flower. The next one is of pastel satin in the same tone as the crepe frock and buttons casually on the shoulder and at the hip of the left side. The decoration is a slender border of delicate beaded design.

On the seated figure is a Pompadour taffeta jacket with large puffed sleeves which the wearer pulls high and low into fantastic shapes.

The Charm of Chiffon Recaptures Woman's Fancy

New York—The union of a heavy and a sheer crepe, or any material in two weights was sure to follow such successful combinations as those in which we have been dressing.

A dark dress, lighter above the waistline, is usually very flattering to the average woman. As a rule plain chiffon, or some other plain materials are more kindly than printed ones in monotone pattern, as in lace. There are many laces being worn at the moment, but it is the dress with chiffon or other transparent top which catches our fancy.

For some seasons we have thought of white, we chose satin, that was useful primarily to carry a gay design, usually floral. We were in danger of forgetting that plain chiffon is a very pleasant companion on warm days, and a most agreeable one for both formal and informal evenings.

We also seem to have formed the habit of wearing black chiffon rather than colored. If we thought of white, we choose satin, or if we wanted a sheer we settled upon either lace or organdie. When we wanted color, we were inclined away from chiffon. However, we have changed our minds about all this and now show an amazing enthusiasm for colored chiffons ranging all the way from gray to brilliant blues and equally vivid purples and greens.

One associates chiffon with beading. Now we are once more confronted with chiffons sans beads and chiffons with them. Not the all-over beading of yesteryear but border effects, the beaded boleros and other jackets. Beaded sleeve decorations are also shown at the armhole when there are no sleeves, below the elbow or across the shoulders when there are sleeves.

The dress sketched is a particularly pleasing version of the dropped shoulder line and one that makes full sleeves easier for the large woman to wear with anything like the necessary grace.

AN INFORMAL DINNER DRESS

A formal afternoon and dinner dress developed in a rough sheer crepe, with the yoke and the puffed sleeves in chiffon and lace in matching color. The button detail of the bodice is interesting.

Shirtwaist Dresses in Men's Shirtings

In a season of constant surprises, it is quite in line that the precise tailoring associated with tailored style ideas should come into decided prominence in collections of washable daytime dresses. Here it takes the form of the shirtwaist frock, developed in men's shirtings, in pique, in seersucker and silk-finished cottons, discreet as to coloring and design, and distinctive because cleverly varied.

The shirtwaist dress with man-tailored collar, details of tucked vestee, plastron or front-buttoned closings, sometimes showing inverted pleats and Norfolk pockets on both bodice and skirt, forms an important division of wash frock collections.

Preparing Frog Legs for Epicures.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

FROGS, once famous only for their hind legs, but whose skins now make book covers and fine glue, annually add more than $130,000 to the industrial census figures of Louisiana. Frog raising and the collection of frogs from streams, ponds, and swamps are therefore becoming important activities.

It requires from four to five years for the frog whose legs are edible to reach adult size. When the warm spring sun tempers the water in our ponds, it is mating-time for frogs. A female frog may lay as many as 240 eggs. The eggs are deposited in small masses on water plants or on sticks or leaves lying in shallow water. An egg consists of the yolk—the round black center—and the vitelline envelope—the surrounding transparent membrane—which begins to absorb water as soon as the egg is laid, and thus immediately swells to be several times its original size.

But already danger besets the germ of life growing there. A gray fungus or mold may penetrate the envelope, sprout upon the yolk, and thus cut off the life of the little frog before it has well begun. But if fate is kind and conditions are favorable, the central yolk, at first a single cell, begins at once to grow, dividing into two cells, these into four, these into eight, and so on in the typical way.

Under favorable conditions, the tadpole hatches on the fourth day. At first it is a minute, flattened, yellowish object, with conspicuous branching filaments, its gills, at one end and a coarse, rudderlike appendage, the tail, at the other.

The little creature at this stage can barely wriggle away from its cast-off envelope, to squirm upward to the surface of the water, where it instinctively seeks the shelter of foliage and of the shallow water, for at this age it easily becomes the prey of small fish and other ever-hungry enemies.

Development of Tadpole.

In a few days, when its mouth parts have begun to develop, it nibbles the "scum" of green algae which forms a dense mat over every submerged stone or pebble in the stagnant pond.

The mouth of the tadpole is not at all like that of the adult frog. A sharply hooked beak, suggesting that of a parrot, but almost microscopic in size, adorns the front of the tadpole's head and is useful as a means of scraping and tearing at the minute water plants and animals which it takes for food.

At this stage tadpoles are scavengers, and fortunate are they to find the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table in the form of fragments of fish or other food left by larger and more careless banqueters in Nature's storehouse. This rich fare fattens the tadpole's body to ridiculous rotundity. His tiny, lidless eyes stare solemnly upward at the water surface, to which he must now rush every few moments for a lungful of air, as his gills are beginning to be absorbed and he has had since to depend largely on his two nostrils, equipped with valves to keep them closed and water-tight during his submarine excursioning, augmented by a spiraculum, or breathing pore, on the left side of his body.

His tail has developed to a thing of surprising strength and pliability, for on its power alone his safety depends in the increasingly bitter struggle to escape his countless enemies.

Before the tadpole is many weeks old a pair of budlike growths sprouts near the base of the tail, and shortly these elongate into a pair of hind legs equipped with five toes, which closely resemble those of the adult. At this stage a marvelous power of regeneration may take place, for if a toe or even a leg is nipped off, another one will grow in the place, an exact duplicate of the one lost. After metamorphosis is complete, this regenerative power ceases to function and a limb once lost is not regrown.

Comes Out of the Water.

Some days after the legs appear, the right arm comes out. Now the little tadpole stays near the top of the water nearly all the time and seems very uncomfortable, and no wonder. His left arm is developing just where the breathing pore is located. As soon as it bursts through, his troubles are lessened, for now he can hop out on the bank in true frog fashion and breathe the air freely; for, as we have seen, his nostrils have been functioning for some time as air-breathing organs.

With the formation of his legs his head structure has likewise changed. The scraping black beak gave place to the wide mouth characteristic of the adult frog, the staring eyes acquired lids and nictitating membrane, a tympanum appeared, a definite color pattern showed on the skin, and some glandular cells arranged themselves in characteristic roughened areas all over the back.

Only the tail remains to tell of his former aquatic habits. Day by day it, too, is absorbed into the body, just as were the gills in the very early stages, until at last our little frog is completely metamorphosed and can go freely on shore with his brothers to catch flies among the plants bordering his ancestral pool.

It is now the end of July, and for the next two or three months his only occupation is eating and preventing himself from being eaten—enough to keep him busy and on the alert every instant.

At the approach of the sharp autumn weather he is about half an inch in length and half-grown. While he has no voice as yet, the mating call of his elders may occasionally be heard in the pool as late as September, for frogs are active over a long period of the year and the breeding season may be said to last from April to September, reaching a peak at several different times, as warm weather and heavy rainfall favor it.

At the onset of winter everything is silent, but with sleep, not death. Near the borders of the pond, buried under logs and stones in the mud, the little frogs have begun hibernation for the winter. A wise provision of nature slows down their life processes to suit them to this complete inactivity and apparent inanition.

Many Species Are Known.

While there are about two thousand species of tailless amphibians, we lack a corresponding number of common names for them. We must perforce call everything by the name of "frog" or "toad," although the several families grouped together as "toads," for instance, may be as different structurally and in habits from the true toad, as the lion is different from the camel, although both are mammals.

While most tailless amphibians deposit their eggs in water, with the tailed aquatic tadpole stage intervening between egg and adult, there is one tropical American genus, Eleutherodactylus, in which the young frog completes his metamorphosis entirely inside the egg-capsule, and when it is finally time for him to sally forth he comes out and hops away among the tree tops with no tail to impede him.

Other tropical frogs lay their eggs in the rain-filled axils of giant palm leaves perhaps a hundred feet high in the air. Here it is truly a case of rock-a-bye baby on the tree top to the little frog baby.

In his wind-rocked cradle of rainwater he may have strange bedfellows. Such a bromeliad reservoir from Jamaica yielded a young Eleutherodactylus and tadpoles belonging to two species of frogs, some small crabs, grasshoppers, arboreal cockroaches, a tarantula, and some earthworms, which live high in the air in the quart or two of soil and water which collects in the junctions of leaves with stem.

"Showers" of frogs and toads have been mentioned in the literature of very early times, and, while some of the tales are exaggerated, we know that showers of organic matter actually do occur when the entire contents of a pond are sucked up by a whirlwind and dropped perhaps miles away from their point of origin.

Peculiar superstitions exist about toads and frogs in many countries. Since most races of men observe closely only those creatures which are either directly useful to them or potentially injurious, the majority of the amphibians escaped anything resembling close and protracted study until relatively recent years. It was not until about two centuries ago that the facts of hibernation were definitely known to science. Before that time it was believed that frogs were procreated from the mud—an idea proposed by no less an observer than the illustrious Aristotle himself.

Timber Lands Cannot Be Sold

More than 4,500,000 acres of timber lands in Germany cannot be sold for debts, having been owned by families for generations and must remain in the possession of the eldest son.

Carp's Remarkable Vitality

The carp has a remarkable vitality and power to resist change. It can be frozen into a solid block of ice and carried for long distances only to become lively as ever when thawed out.

To Establish Fire District.

Plattekill, Feb. 18.—The town board of the town of Newburgh is endeavoring to establish a certain fire district, to be covered by an insurance protecting the lives of the active members of the Plattekill Fire Department, Inc., who are willing to cooperate with them. This necessitates the securing of 60 per cent of the property owners signing the petition, which the board is experiencing no difficulty in accomplishing.

At The Theatres

Today

Kingston: "What! No Beer?" Buster Keaton with his sad and expressionless countenance, along with James Schnozzle Durante whose elongated nose has won him international fame, are a couple of gentlemen in their latest laugh picture who find they have a brewery on their hands. What occurs in their efforts to run a brewery is a riot of comedy that is both good and original. Mr. Keaton and Mr. Durante make an ideal co-starring comedy team, and they are ably supported in their efforts by stuttering Roscoe Ates, John Miljan, and Phyllis Barry.

Orpheum: "Air Mail" and "Love Affair." The first attraction, one of the most exciting pictures to be shown in some time, is a story of the air mail service. The dangers of the air mail pilot are faithfully pictured and a fine cast includes Pat O'Brien, Ralph Bellamy, Slim Summerville and Gloria Stuart.

Broadway: "The Vampire Bat." Another unnatural film spectacle from the same school as "Dracula," "Frankenstein," and other horror pictures. It's a weird tale set in a little German village in which a vampire is at work. High excitement and fear reign from the start of this talkie until the finish, and although the plot is hard to believe, some excellent photography contributes much to the success of the show. The cast offers Lionel Atwill, Fay Wray, and Melvyn Douglas.

Tomorrow

Kingston: Same.

Orpheum: "The Ruling Voice" and "The Fighting Champ." Walter Huston and Loretta Young are the principals in this first talkie, a melodrama of a man who directed the destiny of his followers through the medium of his voice, without disclosing his identity. "The Fighting Champ" gives Bob Steele an opportunity of displaying his physical prowess. The serial, "Last of the Mohicans," is also being shown.

Broadway: Same.

PLATTEKILL

Plattekill, Feb. 18—The Birthday Club members met at the home of Mrs. George Sisti, Tuesday afternoon, February 14. In the absence of the club president, Mrs. Arthur Minard of Newburgh, the meeting was conducted by the vice president, Mrs. Elbridge Gerow. Mrs. George Fowler entertained the group of ladies, by reading of the early settlement of Ulster and Orange counties. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess. During the social hour many games were enjoyed. Those attending were Mrs. Laura Minard, Miss May Minard, Mrs. Leander Minard, Mrs. George Fowler, Mrs. Egbert Fowler, Mrs. William Nabor, Mrs. Willet Deyo, Miss Myra Powell, Mrs. Frank Carpenter and the hostess, Mrs. Sisti. Guests present were Mrs. Charles Van Duser, Mrs. Charles Everett and Mrs. Kittle.

The Helen Palmer W. C. T. U., Plattekill division, will attend the Ulster County W. C. T. U. Conference to be held in New Paltz, Wednesday, March 1. Mrs. Colvin, state president, will be the guest speaker during the afternoon session of the conference.

The card party, which was held at Miss Gertrude Kopaski's home Monday evening of the past week, under the auspices of the Plattekill 4-H Club, proved very successful, both socially and financially.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernard Wager were Tuesday evening guests of Miss Kathryn Naughton. The evening was pleasantly spent in card playing.

Holmes To Address First Dutch Men

The eleventh annual patriotic dinner under the auspices of the Men's Club of the First Reformed Church will be held on next Wednesday, February 22, at six o'clock. Two hundred and ten men can be accommodated at this annual banquet, which has become an institution in Kingston. It is fitting that under the tower of this historic church the representative men of Kingston should thus celebrate the anniversary of Washington's birthday, and listen to the inspiring and world-stirring messages that have been given by men of national and international reputation. Weeks ago the club unanimously decided that even under the continued economic depression there should be no thought to forego this get-together of the men of this community. The cost of the dinner, always having been modest, has been reduced this year by twenty-five per cent without in the least reducing the standard of excellence, and from the report of the ticket committee last evening it appears that the demand for tickets is as strong as in all the previous years.

The following are a few of the men that have addressed this gathering in the past: Charles H. Johnson, Dr. W .W. Giles, Judge Isaac Franklin Russell, Sir Harry Armstrong, consul general from England; U. S. Treasurer Wood, Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, Col. William Hayward, Joe Chapple of Boston, Dr. H. Percy Silver, Dr. Fred B. Smith, Dr. C. E. Jefferson, President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt, Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby, Dr. Rolliff Brooks, Dr. Samuel Graffin, Senators Byrne and Hanley, and others. This year Harry N. Holmes, profoundly interested in the World Alliance for International Friendship through the churches, has been secured. Mr. Holmes was born in Australia, a Britisher by birth and training, an American by adoption, is a forceful speaker, and strong on the political and economic situation in Europe. The other speaker tentatively engaged, is William I. Chamberlain, Ph. D., D. D., of New York city. A vigorous man always with a profoundly virile message. Dr. Chamberlain is in constant touch with the Sino-Japanese situation and will likely speak on Jehol and its implications.

RABBI BLOOM DISCUSSES HITLER'S ANTI-JEW CREED

Last Friday night Rabbi Bloom preached on "Hitler and Hitlerism." He said in part: "Once more the monster of anti-Semitism has raised its head from the mire of ignorance, hate and political opportunism. Germany is now beset with a type of anti-Semitism as vicious as any in history. There are times when most of us feel that anti-Semitism is on the wane, but now and again hatred against Jews becomes the tool through which unprincipled people gain their ends.

The Jew has suffered the fate of a minority which has maintained an individual way of life. History shows that anti-Semitism resolves itself into the objection on the part of the ignorant against the ascendency of any group different from itself. When the lie about Jews killing Christ will no longer serve to incite the mob against Israel, when the fiction about the moral inferiority of the Jew has been exploded in most quarters, a new myth about the superiority of Nordic blood becomes the basis of anti-Semitism.

"The recent German decision and the power of a man like Hitler to captivate the minds of a dissatisfied portion of the populace rest, as Emil Ludwig pointed out, upon his ability to satisfy the German need for aristocracy.

"Hitler himself, of humble origin, boasts of being a member of the Nordic race, which he says, despite the efforts of accredited anthropologists, is superior to all other peoples. In this way his followers feel that they are of the upper stratum since they belong to the Nordic race. The Jewish portion of Germany's population is most obviously non-Nordic and since Hitler blames the political policy of Germany upon the late Walter Rathenau and his school, he insists that Jews and other non-Nordics are responsible for Germany's present unstable condition. Strangely enough, however, Hitler advocates Fascist policies of government which are non-Nordic. In one breath he asserts that ideas have nothing to do with Nordic race strain and in another he condemns all Catholics as non-Nordics. Such a condition in a country like Germany is an outrage. However, it has served to make German Jewry conscious of its identity as a group with specific ideals and yearnings.

"We, in America, must not be less conscious of our Jewish obligations because our government is more enlightened and our position secure."

Financial and Commercial

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—The stock market moved sideways in a quiet week-end session today. Scattered selling was largely offset by buying or short covering elsewhere in the list, with the result that price averages showed scant change. The close was barely steady. Transfers for the short session approximated 300,000 shares.

Brokers said distress selling had practically vanished in the past two sessions, and there was a tendency among professional traders to cover short commitments. A somewhat steadier tone in bonds also helped sentiment in shares.

A few soft spots cropped out in the final dealings. Union Carbide lost a couple of points, in connection with which news tickers mentioned uncertainty over continuance of 50-cent quarterly dividend. Pressure against Consolidated Gas reappeared, that issue losing more than a point. R-M-T also sagged a couple of points.

Fresh strength of the European gold currencies against the dollar appeared. Indications that the international speculative ring which has conducted raids against various currencies in recent years was again active appeared in absurd rumors circulated abroad concerning American affairs. In authoritative banking quarters here, this was regarded as indicating that bears on the dollar were trying to cover.

The advance in sterling halted, that currency holding about steady. In the continental gold currencies, the French franc advanced only 1/8 of a point. Dutch, Belgian and Swiss currencies were up a few points. The Canadian dollar continued to ease. Recent firmness of silver was reflected in an advance in the Mexican dollar.

POULTRY FACTS

CHICKENS POINT TO VITAMIN DISCOVERY

Beri-Beri Cure Believed to Have Led to Idea.

Some chickens in Java contracted beri-beri in 1897 and their cure possibly led to the idea expressed in the now common word, vitamin, which is heard and read on every hand, says H. H. Williams of the New York State College of Agriculture. Beri-beri, he says, is a disease of the nerves which leads to paralysis and heart failure. A Dutch physician, named Eijkman, was medical officer to prisoners in Java. He discovered that the hens that were fed only the left-over polished rice from the prisoners' table had contracted the disease.

Doctor Eijkman then added the rice polishings, which is similar to the bran of wheat, to the chickens' diet and they recovered. Then the prisoners were fed the unpolished rice instead of the well-milled sort, and from that time the disease beri-beri ceased to worry medical officers in the Orient.

From that time chemists began to experiment and to theorize on the substances known today as vitamins. The word was first coined twenty years ago by a Polish chemist as a symbol for an unknown substance vital to health and life. Later, the chemists turned to the alphabet as a temporary means to designate each vitamin, since they are of unknown composition. Six different vitamins are now definitely known, although a recent book lists a possible seventeen. No one knows what vitamins are except that they occur in small quantities, that they are easily destroyed by heat and oxidation.

Fight on Tuberculosis in Illinois Successful

The state department of agriculture in Illinois, through its extensive program of testing poultry for tuberculosis, has succeeded in suppressing to a large extent the disease in the counties where this work has been done.

But of much greater importance is the fact that the information secured can be used by any flock owner in other North Central states where tuberculosis in poultry is equally prevalent, to rid his flock of this menace without applying the tuberculin test.

Out of a total of 2,302 poultry flocks in LaSalle, Livingston, Bureau and McLean counties, Illinois, tuberculin tested during the period September 1, 1931, to December 1, 1932, 1,323 or 57 per cent disclosed one or more reacting tuberculosis birds. This is a lower percentage of flock infection than was found in several other counties in the North Central states.

Out of a total of 96,088 old birds tested (over eighteen months of age), 12,571 or 13.08 per cent reacted. Out of a total of 250,802 young birds tested (under eighteen months of age), 3,080 or 1.23 per cent reacted. This strongly confirms previous data secured which shows that old birds are much more seriously affected with tuberculosis than pullets. The lower percentage of the pullets reacted in the counties where the testing was done at an earlier age.

Use Large Bin to Mix Homemade Laying Mash

Use a large bin in which to dump the ingredients for the home-made laying mash. A small bin means that some of the ingredients will lodge in the corners and not receive a thorough mixing. Shovel over the mixture until all the streaks of material disappear. Hens should not receive too much meat scraps one day and too much bran the next day when they are expected to keep up a continuous production of eggs.

Some feed companies sell a supplement which can be purchased to mix with home-grown ground grain. This mixture may contain meat scraps, fish meal, dried buttermilk, bone meal, etc. It contains everything needed in a poultry laying mash which cannot be supplied from the grains produced at home.—Indiana Farmers' Guide.

Clean Out the Rats

Catching rats now may reduce the loss of chicks next spring. We have had good luck in trapping rats by placing a small square of cloth over a steel trap and leaving the trap close to a rat hole. Even if no bait is used the rats will often run over the trigger. We have also used red squill mixed with hamburger steak and have seen no rats in the vicinity for many weeks afterward, indicating the plan is a good one.—Indiana Farmer's Guide.

Time to Do Culling

With the laying flock in winter quarters it is a good time to go over the birds carefully to detect any that are out of condition and likely to be diseased. These, if found, should be removed immediately to avoid any general outbreak. Strict attention at feeding time, noting birds that are slow to come off the roosts, and careful handling will usually bring out the birds that should be removed, making room for pullets to be added later in the season.

WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR THE COMING WEEK.

North and Middle Atlantic States: Rains Monday night or Tuesday and again Friday or Saturday. Warmer over south portion early part of week, colder Tuesday or Wednesday, warmer over south portion Friday.

CARBON DIOXIDE TO CURE DEADLY COUGH

Gas Also Effective in Other Respiratory Ills.

London.—Carbon dioxide, the gas that makes the bubbles in soda water, is being used as a remedy for whooping cough.

The treatment of one of the most distressing and intractable of the minor maladies attacking infant life is the result of a long series of experiments with carbon dioxide carried out by two British specialists in infantile complaints.

Their new treatment does not demand expert handling—the dosage can be handled by any ordinary practitioner.

Carbon dioxide is mixed with oxygen in the proposition of seven parts of carbon dioxide to ninety-three of oxygen.

It is given through a gas mask of the type used by dentists or released in a tent erected over the patient's bed.

As a result of this treatment, one hundred cases, varying in age from ten months to ten years, were relieved in four days and reported as cured within one week.

"This is an epoch-making discovery in the treatment of diseases of the lungs and chest," said a Harley street specialist.

"Carbon dioxide already is an established remedy for pneumonia, but its successful application to whooping cough will in itself greatly reduce the cases of pneumonia, bronchitis and influenza which often follow whooping cough and take such a heavy toll of child life."

The basis of the carbon dioxide treatment is that it irritates the air passages and causes the removal of the disease particles with which they are clogged.

Doctors believe that the new treatment will be successful in most forms of the common cold.

Lindy Trophy Exhibit Numbers 4,000 Pieces

St. Louis, Mo.—The largest single collection of trophies awarded to any one man comprises the Charles A. Lindbergh exhibition in the Jefferson memorial here.

Infrequently does a week pass that new trophies are not received from some part of the world, near or remote. More than 4,000 individual trophies fill an entire wing of the building.

A shipment of 58 trophies recently was received from Mexico. Among the pieces are a book of Mexican air mail stamps, presented by the director general of mail in Mexico, a bulky book of air mail stamps from all parts of the world, moccasins, pillows, religious medals, meticulously carved gourds and a jigsaw puzzle.

Among the solid gold medals and gem-studded trophies there are to be found a bit of petrified trees, small bits of filet lace, crochet work, and other small inexpensive items from humble admirers.

One of the most magnificent trophies recently received is the handsome gold Harmon trophy presented by the International League of Aviators "au Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, laureat des Etats Unis, 1927."

"Forgotten" Penny Cut From Mouth of Boy, 7

Waukesha, Wis.—James Hoag, seven years old, underwent an operation for removal of a penny which had lodged in the roof of his mouth and which he "had almost forgotten." Dr. Melvin Johnson, of the Waukesha Dental Clinic, saw the penny reflected in a dental mirror when he examined James' teeth. It was necessary to cut away tissue before the coin could be extracted. "I didn't tell mother, because she told me never to put money in my mouth. It didn't bother me after a little and I almost forgot about it."

Boy's Diary Leads to Punishment of Father

Marysville, Kan.—When giving evidence against his father, charged with cruelty, a twelve-year-old boy read amazing entries from his diary, recording his father's brutality.

The defendant was William Jenkins, father of four children.

The diary read:

July 25—Father hit Edward with a rake.

July 27—Father hit Edward with an iron tooth.

July 29—Father hit Arthur with a clog.

The father was fined $25.

Duck Is Hero; Even Policemen Say So

Charleston, W. Va.—The city police department was officially advised of the rescue of a drowning bantam rooster by a duck. This is the story:

R. B. Mayes, household owner, told three officers of the rescue. They didn't believe it.

"I'll prove it," said Mayes.

They went to the houseboat and Mayes took "Jigga," the bantam, and tossed him into the water near where "Bill," Mayes' pet duck, was resting.

"Bill" made a dive for the floundering "Jigga," grabbed one of his wings in his beak, and laboriously pulled the rooster to shore.

That's what the officers reported.

Highland Woman's Body Found Frozen

Mrs. Eva Nelson, 70 years old, was missed about her place in Highland several days ago and neighbors became alarmed over her absence. Thursday Sergeant Lockhart's station was notified of the facts and in the absence of the sergeant who was away on other business, the place was entered and Mrs. Nelson's body was discovered on the kitchen floor. She had evidently been dead three or four days and the body was frozen.

Coroner George Suiter of Marlborough was notified and made an investigation. There was no evidence of foul play and death was probably due to exposure.

The body was discovered by her brother, Clayton Halstead, of Poughkeepsie. At the time she was clad only in a nightgown. She lived alone. Two brothers, Clayton and George Halstead of Poughkeepsie, survive.

Egg Auction Market Firm

The prices on the Mid-Hudson Egg Auction at Poughkeepsie during the past week have been very firm. On the Friday auction the lowest prices compared very favorably with the highest prices for the same grades on the New York city market. During the week a total of 436 cases were sold at the following prices:

White Eggs

N. Y. S. Fancy—large, 17½ to 22 cents per doren; Mediums, 14c to 16c.

N. Y. S. Grade A—large, 16c to 20c; Mediums, 13½c to 16½; Pullets, 13½c to 15c.

Producer's Grade—large, 16½c; Mediums 15c.

Brown Eggs

N. Y. S. Grade A—Large, 16¾c to 18½; Mediums, 14½c to 16½c.

The quality of the eggs being consigned to the auction by producers is very high and the buyers are beginning to pay a premium for this quality. They also pay a premium for heavier cases of eggs within a given grade. The officers urge that producers do not lower the quality of eggs being packed because of the low prices. In the long run the quality eggs always bring more money and create a greater demand for eggs.

STEVENS BROTHERS GATHER MORE BOBSLED LAURELS

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 18 (AP).—The Stevens brothers of Lake Placid seem to be doing their level best to capture all the bobsled championships in sight.

J. Hubert Stevens, Olympic and national bobsled champion, added the North American title in the same division to his list yesterday, with his brothers in second and third places.

J. Hubert and his brakeman, Don Delloria, made four runs down the mile and one half stretch on Mt. Van Hoevenberg in a total aggregate time of a trifle over eight minutes—4 minutes to be exact. This betters his time in winning the national title last week by more than 14 seconds and his Olympic time by nearly 20.

Curtis Stevens, national four-man champion, was second and Raymond F. Stevens, national junior title-holder, third. Henry Homburger, builder of the run, was fourth.

The four-man championship was to be decided today.

Wife likes husband better when he is away from home. While he is away she thinks of him as he used to be, but when he is at home she sees him as he is.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

"My feeling on the proposed eight-inch cup, after reading what all the leading professionals have had to say about Gene Sarazen's suggestion, is that it will be a good idea to get the views of the man who supports the golf clubs and is responsible for the game's existence; in other words the average golfer," writes George Jacobus, president of the Professional Golfers' Association of America.

George's summer stamping grounds are in Ridgewood, N. J., but he sends his views from his winter location with the Kenilworth Lodge course, at Sebring, Fla.

"So far I haven't seen where the average players have had the opportunity to voice their opinion," writes Jacobus. "After all, being in the majority, they should be given a chance to try it out and give some means of expressing themselves whereby we could get the true feeling of what the average golfer wants, to make the game more thrilling and interesting to play.

"They, to me, are the ones to be considered. I believe you will find that they will be in favor of a compromise, which will be a six-inch cup. After all, why not value their opinion and give them a chance to try it out.

"I believe the people in power will give this careful consideration. We have no right to dictate or suggest what ought to be or ought not to be. This question came up at an opportune time, I believe, and it will bring out the feeling of all golfers."

It is a certainty the ruling powers of the United States Golf Association will not approve an eight-inch cup, but the agitation and discussion now going on may influence them to look more than casually into the subject and determine whether a compromise enlargement, say to 5½ or 6 inches, would be for the best interests of the game and its average players.

It is an excellent idea in these times for the U. S. G. A., as well as any other ruling organization, to keep an ear fairly close to the ground and an eye to windward.

He's An Obstinate Cuss

The U. S. G. A. found out quickly it couldn't jam the the original "balloon" ball down the throat of John Duffer. It will be worth hearing what he has to say about the bigger cup proposition. If he wants it, eventually he will get it, whether the U. S. G. A. likes it or not.

While the movement is now on to give college sports back to the boys, it looks like an opportune time also to consider giving golf back to the golfers.

Final Tributes Paid To Ernie Schaaf

Wrentham, Mass., Feb. 18 (AP).—From the little white house he bought his mother with his first earnings, the body of Ernie Schaaf, fallen ring gladiator, was borne today by sorrowing friends to its last resting place.

The cortege passed from the Schaaf home to tiny St. Mary's Church through streets lined with hundreds of residents as flags on the town hall and on public schools fluttered at half staff.

The five cars immediately following the hearse with its gray casketed burden were filled with flowers. The largest of these floral tributes were from Primo Carnera, giant Italian under whose gloved fist Schaaf fell in Madison Square Garden last Friday night; Max Schmeling, German boxer; Jack Sharkey, who lifted the heavyweight crown from Schmeling's head, and Johnny Buckley, Schaaf's manager.

As the body of the popular fighter who died following upon a bout with Primo Carnera in New York, was lowered into the grave, a navy escort fired the traditional three volleys and a U. S. Marine bugler sounded the solemn taps.

270-Pounder After Primo Carnera Now

Ray Impellettiere, 22-year-old boxer from Cold Springs, N. Y., weighing 270 pounds, is seeking a match with Primo Carnera in the "dreadnaught" class and has applied for the support of the boxing commission in the matter. It was said Commissioner Muldoon is in favor of the pairing. The "dreadnaught" class was created by Muldoon after a knockout by Impellettiere 14 months ago.

No Hopes for Jim Corbett

New York, Feb. 18 (AP)—Death is believed by his physicians to be only a "question of hours" for James J. Corbett, former heavyweight boxing champion, who is suffering from a heart ailment.

Maroon Defeated By Port Jervis

Kingston Drops Third DUSO League Game When Defeated by Port Jervis, 30-21—Kingston Seconds Win in Preliminary From Senecas, 21-20.

Kingston had its chance against Port Jervis Friday night in the local gym and fumbled the opportunity, losing by a 30-21 score. Port was good and for a while Kingston was in the same class, in fact the Red and Black remained in the race until the middle of the last quarter, when the Kingsmen slipped into oblivion as if on a greased slide.

Kingston had the calibre of Port, but not the steadiness. When the locals became erratic the Red and Black squad continued along in its smooth sure way, never missing a trick. The visitors worked in unison and are by far the best cagers who have breezed into town this winter.

The score of the first quarter was small and the game, outside of the exhibition of floor work, appeared like a warming up drill, but apparently Port was getting its bearings, for at the outset of the second addition of the fray, the leather fell through the hoop frequently and Port led, 16-9 at the half.

And the third quarter brought little change. It proved that the Red and Black were capable of holding its lead and in between the rough spots that led to Port having 21 fouls called on it, the Chasemen tossed in a few more and at the end of the quarter Kingston was trailing a nine point lead of Port's, 25-16.

But Kingston came into its own once more and nearly pulled the carpet out from under Port. The Red and Black stood by for a while and the Maroon went on a scoring spree. After a few minutes of play, Kingston was within four points of their opponent, 21-25 and for a while Kingston fans were excited and Port's looked worried, but just as quickly as Kingston came into its own it dropped out again and Port's momentary slump ended; so Kingston stopped at 21 points and Port got five more to make it 30.

2 Games This Week.

Kingston High plays two games this week, Wednesday afternoon Kiski and his boys trip to Poughkeepsie and Friday night Kingston goes to Monticello for the last DUSO League game of the season.

Preliminary.

The K. H. S. Seconds trimmed the Senecas in a close battle 21-20 in the preliminary. The school boys led by a point at half time 15-14.

Saturday Society Review

The members of Wiltwyck Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution, with their invited guests are to hold open house in celebration of George Washington's birthday, February 22, and enjoy a Washington tea party at 2 o'clock on that day.

The chapter house will be decorated appropriately to the occasion.

All those who have attended former functions of this organization realize full well the effort that is made by the members to arrange for the comfort and assure the visitor an enjoyable afternoon.

Local as well as non-resident members with their invited guests are cordially urged to attend and enjoy the hospitality of this committee of Wiltwyck Chapter.

In addition to a social afternoon, arrangements have been made for cards by those who care to play.

Delicious refreshments will be served in the very charming Colonial dining room.

It will be appreciated if members planning to attend, notify Mrs. Lindsely 2425 or Mrs. Sheafer 1562, chairmen of this committee.

Word received from Mrs. John Searing, who is spending the winter in Florida, says that she has left Miami and is now at Orlando.

Mrs. M. S. V. Owens and Miss Ellen Van Slyke, who are spending the winter in Spain, have been in Seville for the past two weeks. They plan to return to Kingston in May.

Mrs. W. Poyntell Kemper has returned from Philadelphia where she has been for several weeks on account of the serious illness of her mother.

Word has been received from Dr. and Mrs. Raymond S. Crispell, who left Kingston several weeks ago on an extended automobile trip through the south and west, that they expected to be in El Paso, Texas, over this weekend. Dr. and Mrs. Crispell spent several days at The Inn-By-The-Sea, Pass Christian, Mississippi. After visiting Los Angeles and other points of interest on the west coast, they intend to return to Kingston, arriving during the latter part of April.

The new state armory was again the scene of a very delightful social event Friday evening, when the annual charity ball of the local order of Knights of Columbus was enjoyed by an attendance that filled the drill shed. The program of entertainment was opened by a pleasing musical concert, played by the Paramount Broadcasters. Leading vaudeville favorites from the theatrical center in New York city presented numbers that were justly applauded. An added attraction on the program of entertainment was the performance staged by the pupils of the Helen Cashin School of Dancing. These local youthful dancers received well-deserved acclaim. The assembly dancing was continuous with Ernie's Orchestra and the Paramount Broadcasters rendering the latest dance numbers. The fine condition of the dance floor added greatly to the pleasure of the dancing enthusiasts. The cigar and door booths were well patronized as was the dining room, where delicious refreshments were faultlessly served.

A Shamrock Subscription dancing party, sponsored by a group of members of the Catholic Daughters of America, will be given on the evening of St. Patrick's night, March 17, in the assembly hall of the K. of C. Home on Broadway. These delightful dances are held each year, and this one promises to be an exceptionally pleasing and attractive affair. The patronesses are Mrs. James R. Higley, Mrs. Peter Carey, Mrs. Walter C. Miller, Mrs. Edgar T. Shultis, Miss Margaret Kennedy, Mrs. N. D. J. Murphy and Mrs. Walter J. Miller.

Milk Most Important Food Product of New York State

Commissioner Baldwin Traces History of This Valuable Food—Milk Was Used 6,000 Years Ago

Editor's Note—This article is one of a series on economy and food appearing in this paper in cooperation with the Consumers Information Service of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

By CHARLES H. BALDWIN
Commissioner, Department of Agriculture and Markets, Albany, New York

Charles H. Baldwin

Of all the products of agriculture in our most fruitful state, it can be said with certainty that the most important from the standpoint of our citizens is milk.

The cow is the foster mother of the human race, and the milk she produces has a history as varied and as fascinating as human-kind itself. In addition to her own burden of bearing and nursing her young, she has carried mankind on through the ages. The domestication of the milch cow has perhaps been one of the most important steps in the progress of civilization.

Among the oldest written records of the human race are in Sanskrit preserved in India. At the time these records were begun 6,000 years ago, milk was already an important article of food. In fact, so important was the cow that a man's wealth was measured by the number of cattle he owned, and the cow was considered a sacred animal.

In India, and later in Babylonia and Egypt, Hathor, the goddess who watched over the fertility of the land, was depicted as a cow. More than 50 references to cows and milk are to be found in the Old Testament, and the promised land was described as "flowing with milk and honey."

From these early days to the present, the cow has continued to be the constant companion of man, and her importance as a source of food has not been diminished by the thousands of years which have passed.

The soldiers of Jenghiz Khan, the Mongol Emperor, occupying the territory of Manchuria now in dispute between Japan and China, carried dried milk as a part of their ration.

It is amazing to find the avenues down which we are led when considering the historical aspects of milk. For instance, we find that the Tartars of West Siberia made a fermented milk distilled as an intoxicating beverage resembling brandy, and the Scythian tribes prepared a fermented mare's milk into a drink known as "Kumiss."

Did you ever stop to think what a boon to civilization are the cow, the dairyman and the distributor?—enabling every housewife in this great Empire State, and all other states for that matter, to step out every morning and get at her very door a bottle of this wonderful health-giving, health-protecting and delicious substance—milk.

Come In Handy

Jim Allen shivered as he stood in the jostling group and waited dumbly for the big doors to open and the crowd to rush in. Slowly he counted the men around him—twenty-eight of them, all trying to get the same job.

As the moment approached for the doors to open, Jim's tension grew. If he failed this time he would have to beg or steal, for Sally had to have food and warmth; there were exactly thirty-three cents left in the worn pocket of his trousers and he had had no breakfast.

They had been neighbors back home—and had fallen in love as naturally as any other denizens of the forest and had spent a blissful month planning their future. Then Sally had suddenly developed a streak of restlessness.

"Just seems like I couldn't settle down till I got a chance to see a big city," she had told him. "I ain't never seen a street car nor any big fine houses or nothin'. They say they got houses down there twenty or thirty stories high, just piled one on top of the other. It must be a sight."

Jim had tried to dissuade her, but in vain. Sally was determined. The adventurous spirit of her pioneer ancestors had seemed to crop out in her. On a bright fall morning she had taken wings unto herself and had flown away, carrying with her a crash covered "telescope" full of home-made clothes and $8.80 in her cheap little purse. Jim had heard from her regularly, but the letters had brought little news; a few laboriously written lines of stilted sentences: "I am well and hope you are the same. I like it here fine, but do miss you a heap. Hope all the folks are well." Then at last had come a note: "I am bad off sick. Can you come? Don't tell Mommy and Poppy."

Half frenzied with terror lest she should be desperately ill, Jim had dropped his work and rushed to town. After a bewildering search he had found her in an unspeakably dreary rooming house, in an unheated room. Her face was pinched then and her cheeks flushed with fever. When he first saw her he was so shocked that he could not speak, but he carried in his heart for years afterward the memory of her face as it lighted up at sight of him.

When the people in the rooming house heard that Sally's friend had arrived they helped him find the things he needed. They directed him where to get food and where to buy fuel for the empty grate. Almost immediately the girl began to show improvement. Jim spent his few dollars with joy, then suddenly found his pockets nearly empty and the search for work began. Day after day he allowed himself only two meals a day, then only one meal until finally, he did not dare permit himself even a cup of coffee. If he didn't get this job—

The doors in front of him opened noiselessly. A well-dressed man stood at the entrance.

"Sorry, boys, but we hired a man yesterday afternoon."

The crowd turned away growling down the unfamiliar street. At a big store window Jim was attracted by a display of homespuns. "These are woven back in the hills by the mountain folk," a card informed him. It would be warm inside, and he felt that he could not endure the cold another minute, so he turned in the door.

"Can I wait on you?" a man's voice inquired.

"I was just lookin' at the homespun you got in the window. Mommy used to make me weave that stuff when I was a youngun."

"Can you still do it?"

Jim nodded listlessly.

"We've got a loom and spinning wheel and we're thinking of putting on a window display for a week. Could you find a mountain girl to spin?"

Something like an electric current swept through Jim as he grasped the import of the other's words.

"Sure could," he answered eagerly.

"All right. Tomorrow's Saturday. You come on down and get the loom set up and we'll start the display on Monday."

So the Sunday papers carried an advertisement to the effect that Sally Lane and Jim Allen of Bear Wallow would give a demonstration of weaving and spinning at Whittington's all the following week.

By the time the store opened Monday morning people were already crowded around the big window, to watch the mountain girl and man at work. Every hour they came out of the show window and talked to the customers in the store.

"They're the quaintest things I ever saw and you ought to hear them talk!" said one customer to another. "Mr. Whittington says he's going to keep Sally to sell the goods because she can explain how it's made and everything, and Jim's going to do some kind of work around the store. Sally told me all about it. She's the happiest little thing—and so pretty—looks just like a wild flower!"

Jim laughed that night for the first time in weeks as he held Sally close in his arms.

"My weavin' come in handy, didn't it?" he said. "And remember how Mommy used to have to beat me to make me do it?"

Arabian Degree Show Much Enjoyed

Approximately 200 members of the Arabian Degree Klan enjoyed the social, luncheon and entertainment put on Friday night in Mechanics Hall following the regular meeting and initiation at which nine new members were received into the order.

The features of entertainment were several high class vaudeville acts from New York city brought to Kingston by George N. Brown of the Orchid Hotel and a former showman himself. Starred on the bill were Laurel and LaVerne, dancers, formerly of the Hollywood Follies; Alice Butler, a cute little miss who danced in George White's Scandals and who next week is to start a contract with the radio team of Olsen and Johnson, and Adler and Dunbar, novelty entertainers on standard vaudeville circuits for the past 15 years.

So pleasing was the show that the Arabian Degree plans on holding another some time during the month of March. This one will be open for the patronage of the public.

Healthful Kidneys
A Winter Necessity

The kidneys assist in the control of the action of the skin and of the heat regulation of the body. During the season of the year when there are quick changes from the warmth of day to the chill of night, or when the body must adapt itself to a change from the extreme of outdoor cold to indoor comfort, the kidney sufferer is in constant danger.

Kidney weakness, and inefficiency, in adapting the body to sudden atmospheric changes, is apt to cause congestion somewhere within the body. In other words, congestion occurs when something prevents the blood from having an equal and normal circulation within the body. These congestions may be acute or chronic in nature and so serious that death may result. Hence, if you present symptoms of kidney disturbance, you should give yourself immediate attention by arranging for a Chiropractic examination. By having your kidneys made normal by Chiropractic, better health for you will follow.

Chiropractic today may save regrets tomorrow!
